

DRAWN TO CAMPUS: A 1939 CARTOON MAP OF BAYLOR UNIVERSITY

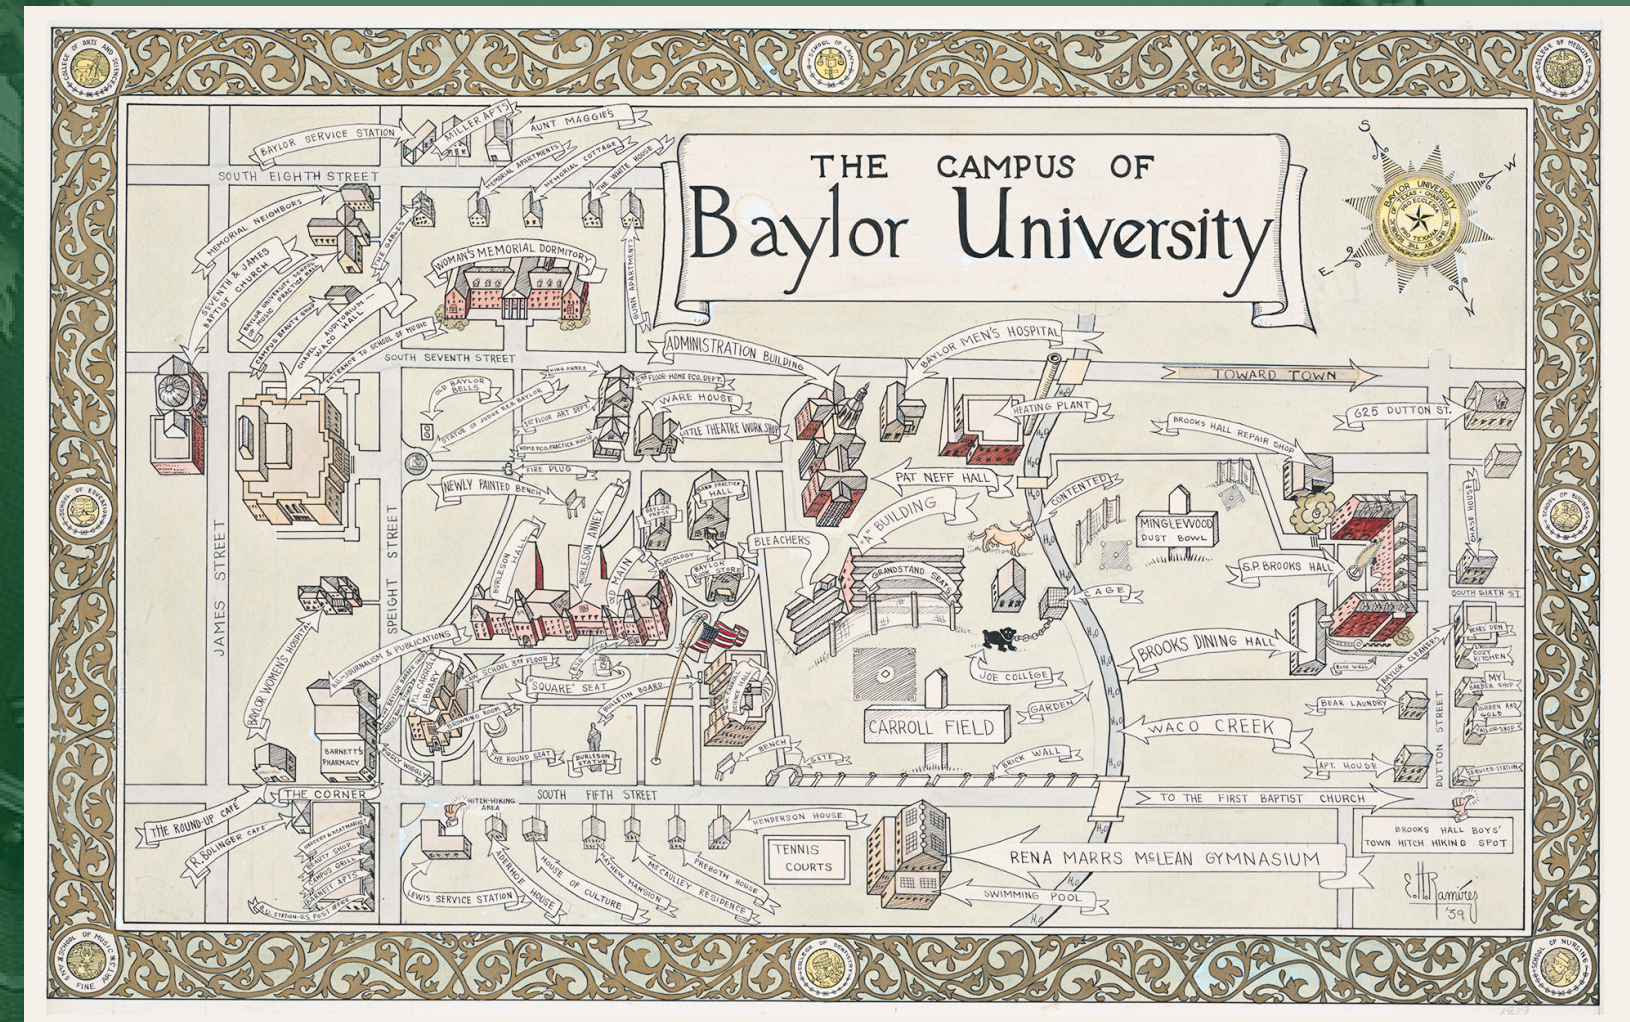

A snowy day on Burseson Quadrangle, ca. 1930s

Crowds at a football game, Carroll Field, ca. 1930s

Students reading the daily newspaper, ca. 1930s

Baylor's campus life can be examined through a variety of sources, and maps are often the most engaging. This exhibit takes a closer look at one such map: a one-of-a-kind piece created by a Baylor student at the dawn of World War II.

E.H. Ramirez of San Antonio,
from the 1939 "Round Up"

Enrique H. Ramirez created this cartoon style map of campus in 1939. At only 22" x 28", this hand-drawn work contains a staggering amount of detail. Ramirez injected his personality into the map with its unique style of illustration and labels.

Areas of interest include newly built Pat Neff Hall, the Rufus Burseson statue, and even a "newly-painted bench!"

View the map online at <http://bit.ly/1939BaylorMap>. This map and hundreds more are part of The Texas Collection's unparalleled collections of maps featuring Texas, the Southwest, and North America.